PERSONALISED CERAMIC MAP PIECES

Award-winning ceramicist Katherine Lees produces screen printed porcelain, including these map pieces which can be customised. The delicate decoration of her handcrafted objects was inspired by items once found in cabinets of curiosities popular in the Victorian Era. Price upon request, katherineleesceramics.com

1. Dante table, price upon request, asherisraelow.com; 2. Set on a solid plinth base, this solid mango wood cabinet features a brass line pattern across its doors. The charcoal stain further enhances this linear detailing and the modern appearance. With three removable interior shelves, the unit could easily function as a practical media unit. IN LINE

Light geometric lines of gleaming brass add a subtle linear element to dark wood furniture and visual interest through a pattern that is intriguing but not overpowering. There's a fine line to get right; we prove that design is in the detail.

THE HOLE STORY

These perforated pendant lights offer a different way to incorporate metal into an interior scheme without the effect being overwhelming. Small holes in the metal shades create an attractive dappled shadow. Whether you opt for brass or steel, these designs offer a lighter touch.
